Tulsa's female music festival returns for year two with Nashville singer-songwriter, Katie Herzig headlining

TULSA, OKLAHOMA, July 1, 2018—Fowler Automotive presents MisFEST, Tulsa's first music festival focused on empowering women in the music industry is returning for year two on September 15, 2018 at the River West Festival Park. One-hundred percent of proceeds will benefit the River Parks Authority and the Woody Guthrie Center.

The headliner for this year's all-lady lineup is Nashville singer, songwriter, producer, and Emmy-nominated Katie Herzig. Her music is described as both intimate and epic, meaning fans can expect to end the night with an incredible show. Herzig has performed at Bonnaroo, on VH1 and has toured extensively both as a headliner and as a supporting artist for acts such as Brandi Carlile, Sara Bareilles, Ingrid Michaelson and The Fray. Herzig also co-produced Ingrid Michaelson's platinum-selling single "Girls Chase Boys." Local and regional acts include Faye Moffett, The Golden Ones, Lauren Barth, Nightingale, Rachel Bachman, Brother Rabbit, and Lincka from OKC.

In addition to the diverse lineup, the MisFEST festival grounds experience will include food trucks, large-scale interactive art installations, vendors, family activities, and games. Other programming new this year include a songwriting workshop on August 2 at Fair Fellow Coffee and a special "Uncovering the Music" event with Katie Herzig on Sept 14 at the Woody Guthrie Center.

MisFEST, short for Music is She and She is Music, was founded by local musicians Casii Stephan and Amira Al-Jiboori after noticing the high level of talent and diversity that female artists in the area had to offer and wanting to build a stronger community among them. The festival is designed to shine a spotlight on talented women both on and off stage, whether they are lead singers, songwriters, musicians, sound engineers, DJs, or producers. All day tickets start at just $15.
